

ECOSOC Crisis 1.1.1

African Countries including Sudan and South Africa is undergoing an significant economic recession due to the failure of recognizing the importance of poverty reduction. United States of America on the other hand refuses to provide further financial aid, thereby causing a overall crisis across the Continent of Africa.

The recession went worse as countries failed repetitively in reaching an agreement to alleviate the situation. Countries are seeing more parades and riots due to the governments' inability to put forward a directive. This situation has also swept Europe as refugees of the crisis continuously flood to Europe from Africa, seeking only their survival. The Western Europe and Asia soon followed. While in American States where the refugee crisis does not seem so imminent, the economy is nevertheless significantly affected by the general disorder caused by the crisis.
